steel Sheet was shipped from Hankow to London, and is now transhipped to steamers leaving about the end of Jan for the mouth of the Yenisei River, and was hence water borne to Krasnoyarsk, where it reached the Siberian Railway. The expenses by this route are said to be lower than those incurred by overland carriage, and should the limited period during which the Kara Sea is open to navigation not prove a serious obstacle, we may expect to see a year or two more in the shipments of brick tea to Great Britain.

Although the export of silk exceeded that of 1896, it did not compare favourably with 1895. A large crop was anticipated, but owing perhaps to the worms having suffered during their early stages by a long spell of rainy weather, it fell short of expectation. Prices, however, were much higher, and the demand from abroad justified buyers in operating freely. The drop in exchange during the summer caused a further advance, the well-known "Gold Killing" ship obtaining the fine price of Tls. 475. Exporters did well in consequence of the low exchange and the good price obtained abroad. Stocks in hand were likely to be very low, and it is difficult to judge whether the market will remain quiet for the time being.

Secretary
